

OPENING ROCK CITY AS CAMP AREA LIKELY

District Forester Dobbins Sees Strong Likelihood C. C. Camp will be Located in Area, Road Built

A strong possibility that Rock City, north of Salamanca, will be opened up as a public camp ground...

Mr. Dobbins says there also is a strong possibility that a new C. C. camp will be located on Cattaraugus County Reforestation Area No. 8, north of Salamanca.

From this center C. C. C. members would be employed in work on that area, and on Area No. 1, in the town of Napoli; No. 4, town of Mansfield; No. 5, towns of Ellicottville, Great Valley and Little Valley, and No. 6, town of Great Valley.

Projects on which they would be engaged include the construction of fire lines, fire hazard reduction, forestry land improvement, timber surveys, construction of water holes for fire protection, control of insect pests and plant diseases, boundary surveys and stream improvement.

The construction of roads to permit quick transportation of fire fighters in case of need would be an important project.

The experiment of seeding hardwood trees directly, started in the fall of 1933, will be continued and reforestation by planting of trees carried on.

The work planned on the Cattaraugus county reforestation areas would require approximately 105,000 man days, Mr. Dobbins said.

He revealed that tentative location of a C. C. camp 1 1/2 miles southwest of Panama, in Chautauqua county, has been approved by Major Green of the United States Army, stationed at Fort Niagara, and Mr. Allen of Buffalo, member of the State Department of Health.

From this camp C. C. men would be employed on work similar to that planned in Cattaraugus county, on the five reforestation areas in Chautauqua county. These areas comprise 1200 acres.

Opening of Rock City to picnickers and campers has been strongly urged in Little Valley and Salamanca the past winter. It has been proposed that a road which formerly led into Rock City from Whig street be opened up again.

At present at least one camper's cabin is located in the big area.

Closing of Depot Marks Passing of Belvidere

Belmont, April 23—With the closing of the Erie railroad station at Belvidere, sought in Public Service Commission proceedings, that village, once a thriving center of population and industry and a suggested location for Allegany's county seat, will cease to be even a flag or whistle stop.

Belvidere had its inception back in the early fifties when the Erie opened its railroad through this section. Its name came from the Judge Philip church's nearby homestead.

Back in 1860 French's Gassetter describes the place as one of the most important on the Genesee. Stage and freight routes radiated in all directions. It boasted three saw-mills, a church, a hotel, a saw and stove mill, a cheese factory and many small stores and mechanic's shops.

The postoffice was abandoned a few months ago and service now is supplied by a rural route from Belmont.

ARSON SUSPECT DIES OF BURNS

Jamestown Man, Found in Shack after Two Suspicious Fires, Succumbs in Hospital

Jamestown, April 18—Peter J. Gagliano, 35, of 156 South Erie Street, Mayville, died at 8:05 o'clock last night in Jamestown General Hospital of burns received early yesterday.

According to police, a fire had been set in an unoccupied dwelling at 529 West Third Street owned by the G. G. & B. Land Company of this city, a finance corporation.

The police declared they thought some one may have been hired to do the incendiary work.

Police also say another fire had been set about half an hour earlier in an unoccupied store and dwelling at 218 Winsor Street, owned by Anthony Luizzo of Clymer. Both buildings were badly damaged.

In a shed a short distance from the second fire Gagliano was found horribly burned. He was taken to the hospital, but no hope was given for him from the start. It is believed gasoline was spread in the house and when it was touched off there was a blast heavier than the firebug expected.

Firemen succeeded in limiting the blaze at the Winsor Street place to the first floor. Evidence of incendiaryism was found at every hand. On the second floor attached to a door knob, they found a large truck inner tube—cut to fabricate a long rubber bag. Inside this tube was another smaller rubber receptacle filled with gasoline.

Police, told there had been a cutting affray in a shack at 316 1/2 Steele street, found Gagliano in bed, obviously badly burned. His features were so blackened it was first thought he was a Negro. It was not until Gagliano had been taken to the hospital that his identity was revealed.

Gagliano was arrested on a charge of arson in 1930, police say, as a result of information preferred by Chief Beatty. The case never came to trial and insurance was recovered by the owners of the structure after payment had been contested in a supreme court lawsuit.

On April 10, 1925, firemen were called to extinguish a blaze in a dwelling at 480 Crescent street, then owned by the Gaglianos. Fire department officials at that time recorded the blaze in their records as one of suspicious origin, but Gagliano succeeded in collecting more than $6,500 insurance to cover the fire loss.

Gagliano had resided with his wife and family at Mayville the past eight years. He was a barber and electrician by trade, but had not worked at either steadily for some time, his wife told police.
